UN expert: The most important obstacle to the eradication of torture is willful ignorance

Based on well-documented scientific research, the primary reason States fail to prevent torture and cruel treatment is neither malicious intent, nor a lack of resources, but is to be found in neuro-biological and social factors that have shaped human decision-making throughout history.

“In fact, most human decision making is not governed by rationality, morality and common interest, but by emotional impulses pursuing short-term self-interest.” This applies not only to private citizens, but also to political leaders, officials, judges and journalists.”

we say no to electronic torture a

It is our philosophy that all men are equal before the law and that everybody's fundamental rights to life shall be protected. No one shall be subjected to torture or held in slavery. We are against the use of technologies and techniques capable of endangering the human physical and / or psychological health, to modify the individuals' autonomy and affect their dignity. Neuro weapons should be strictly prohibited and illegal experimentation in these fields met with force. We strongly support the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture's investigations into Cyber-torture crimes against innocent civilians.
